DEAR CUSTOMER:

We are greatly indebted to the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station for the work they have been doing in running yield tests and assembling other information on Hybrid and Open-Pollinated Corn.

The crosses used in producing Texas Hybrid Seed Corn have been produced under the supervision of Texas A&M College and are produced from corns that are most adapted to our southern rainfall and growing conditions in general. It has been necessary to produce different Texas Hybrids to be used in the different growing areas in Texas, this because of the variation in growing conditions.

It has been the objective of those in charge of production of seed stocks and the growers of Hybrid Seed Corn to develop a variety that would be suitable for all parts of the Southern Corn Belt. From the information released from the different experiment stations over Texas this past growing season, we find that all Texas Hybrids gave wonderful results compared to Open-Pollinated and other corns grown out of State. Several Hybrids have now been tested for several years and a more accurate prediction of their performance is possible. For this period, Texas No. 20 shows a wide range of adaptability and can be more generally recommended than other Hybrids, both from the standpoint of its performance over several years and because of its outstanding record in 1947. The following is a description of Texas Yellow Hybrid No. 20:

"A double cross hybrid released in 1946. Similar to No. 18, but more widely adapted. Parentage: (KYS x 203) x (127C x 132A). This hybrid has a stiff stalk and the leaves are not so brittle as those of No. 18. The long slender ear has a tight shuck which covers the tip well. Grain fairly large, soft, and bright yellow. Yield compares well with that of Hybrids No. 12 and No. 18."

Associated Seeds, Inc. produce Asgrow Hybrid Corn under their supervision from the time the stock seed is received until the finished product is in the bag ready to be delivered to you. We have built one of the most modern corn processing plants in the Southwest, at San Antonio. We are in a position to furnish you with the best quality of seed corn available.
